Getting ready for Kindergarten doesn't only mean being able to count to ten and say the alphabet.

"Ready" means ready to learn. All children develop at different rates and have a diverse background of experiences. Here are some readiness guidelines as you prepare your child for kindergarten.

- Dresses self – snaps, buttons, zips, puts on shoes.
- Able to separate from parent.
- Attends to a task independently - uses bathroom and washes hands.
- Clean up skills – puts toys away when finished playing.
- Performs daily routines – takes dishes to sink when finished.
- Takes turns.
- Uses words to resolve conflict - asks for a toy instead of grabbing it.
- Works or plays cooperatively.
- Able to listen and participate in group activities.
- Follows simple rules.
- Is persistent and asks for help when needed.
- Understands spatial awareness- uses words such as up, down, under, over, in, out.
- Knows name, age and birthday when asked.
- Recognizes and writes his/her name.
- Knows colors and shapes.
- Can identify numbers 1 to 10 and letters of the alphabet.
- Sorts objects into groups by color, shape, etc.
- Understands patterns– green, blue, green, blue...
- Able to count to 20.
- Follows two and three step directions.
- Listens to a story.
- Gains meaning by listening - can answer a question about story when finished reading.
- Uses scribbles, shapes, letters, pictures or words to represent a thought or idea.
- Understands that print has a meaning – knows a stop sign means stop.
- Speaks clearly.
- Makes needs known through language - asks for water when thirsty.
- Uses expanded vocabulary - tries out new words that are heard.
- Shows appreciation for books and reading
- Understands books, print - looks at books from front to back, print from left to right.
- Is aware of rhyming words - sings nursery rhymes.
- Able to perform simple fine motor skills – pour water into glass, string beads, etc.
- Combines movement to accomplish physical tasks - runs, jumps, throws, kicks.
